Dear Guests

For years—probably as long as I’ve known him—my friend Mort Crim, whom you may know as a TV broadcaster for more than five decades, has bragged about his amazingly talented daughter, Carey. First she wrote a play. Then she wrote another. Before long she had written eight plays that were being performed all over the country. Then they started being produced overseas. Heck, this very show, Morning After Grace, just opened in Poland to sold-out houses.

But through all that success, the glow on Mort’s face has always been the same. He’s simply proud of his daughter.

Morning After Grace is really the culmination of years of my friend bragging about Carey’s work—and eventually taking me and about fifty of our friends to see the show performed live. Mort, 90 years young, is thrilled that his daughter’s work is now being recognized and celebrated in his adopted hometown of Jacksonville.

Most of the productions you see here are lighthearted, filled with big musical numbers, singing, and dancing. This show is a little different. Morning After Grace deals with real life—maybe not yours or mine exactly, but certainly someone’s. It touches on topics we don’t often tackle: life, loss, romance, a little intimacy, and maybe even reliving the 60s (for medicinal purposes, of course). We even explore the complicated ways families react when our kids’ choices don’t quite line up with our own. Some of you might call it a little edgy. All of you will call it funny.

You might be surprised once or twice. And some of you may even shed a tear. A few of you might even tell me it felt a little too real. But that’s the beauty of great storytelling. As with all our productions, Tod has brought Carey Crim’s wonderful script to life beautifully. This show feels authentic, and for some of you it may even be powerful. Most of all, I believe you will truly enjoy it.

I’m very proud and very happy to present Carey Crim’s Morning After Grace. I hope you’ll come experience this special show with us.

We have so many great shows coming up. This month we have two Music Series shows, The Moody Blues and The Eagles tributes. We’ll have several more this year. For our next theatrical show, I invite you to join us as we celebrate our nation’s 250th birthday with 1776! Of course, you can find all 2026 shows on the website at alhambrajax.com and please keep coming back to see what we are adding along the way.

Your friend,

Craig
